Long time member of UK soul group THE REAL THING, EDDY AMMO has died. Though details are sketchy it seems that Eddy, who was 73, died suddenly whilst in Australia.

Born to Ghanaian parents in Toxteth, Liverpool, Eddy's first forays into music were in the 60s when he was part of vocal group, The Chants. The Chants boasted a classic harmony group line up and played the Liverpool club circuit – at times using the Beatles as their backing band. They recorded for Pye and many of their singles are now hugely collectable – notably a doo-wop flavoured version of 'I Could Write A Book'.
